O'REILLY EMERGING TELEPHONY CONFERENCE

JANUARY 24 – 26, 2006 | SAN FRANCISCO AIRPORT MARRIOTT

ETel

CONFERENCE OVERVIEW

Telephony and the Web are merging to offer a network with unprecedented potential for developers, entrepreneurs, and end users. Fueled by open source contributions, VoIP and open telephony technologies have the potential to disrupt the communications establishment and create waves in many other areas of the technology industry.

The O'Reilly Emerging Telephony Conference focuses on these hybrid networks which will enable a new generation of powerful communication applications and open up new opportunities and new markets.

Geeks with open source telephony components are shaking the telecom world up, offering platforms for telephony applications that are low cost or no cost and free from regulation and carrier prohibitions. Their customers are currently the long tail of the telecom market—those yearning for niche applications at a low cost, the same long tails that have bred killer apps on the Web.

Major ideas that will be addressed include:

- Articulating the revolution that is happening in the telephony industry—infrastructure, technology, and tools
- Introduce the innovators—who is doing what and where the competition stands
- Examine emerging business opportunities and under-served markets—where's the money?
- Spark creative discussions among enterprise managers, developers, hackers, and sponsors interested in telephony
- Show how to adapt, integrate, and deploy these new tools right away, via case studies and real- world examples

Topics will include:

- Commercial open source VoIP deployment case studies
- Developer opportunities
- End-user VoIP applications
- Existing and new business models for VoIP services
- Open source deployments on NGO and non-profit settings
- Open Source PBX: Asterisk, SipX PBX, Opal, and others
- Novel applications of VoIP in business settings
- Maximizing return from already deployed VoIP networks
- SIP hardware
- SIP-only deployments
- Skype and other commercial peer-to-peer telephony
- TDM / POTS integration
- Voice-Driven Network Applications
- VoIP network application case studies
- VoIP network testing and tools
- VoIP software developer tools
- VoIP software modules and enablers
- VoIP telephony hardware
- VoIP termination provision
- VXML
- Wireless VoIP software and hardware

Our audience, an influential mix of technologists, strategists, developers, CEOs, CTOs, CIOs, analysts, bloggers, press, venture capitalists, and entrepreneurs is the perfect setting to demonstrate your innovative voice products and services.

Sponsorship opportunities are available to companies who wish to take a leadership position amongst the Emerging Telephony community.
